SKI JUMPING

The FIS Ski Jumping Summer Grand Prix, the summer season of the FIS Ski Jumping World Cup, will make its traditional stop in Courchevel on 8 and 9 August for its 35th edition, which is already shaping up to be a truly historic event.

This edition will have a very special flavour. For the last time before their modernisation ahead of the French Alps 2030 Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games, the Olympic ski jumps of Le Praz will welcome the world's ski jumping elite. It will be one final opportunity for athletes, spectators and fans to experience the thrill of a venue that, over the decades, has become one of the international benchmarks in the discipline.

Always maintained to the highest standards, the Olympic ski jumps are now preparing to enter a new era. The modernisation works, undertaken in preparation for the French Alps 2030 Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games, will not only ensure the venue continues to meet the highest international standards but also build on the legacy of the Albertville 1992 Olympic Winter Games, for which Courchevel was one of the iconic host venues.

The Olympic ski jumps of Courchevel hold a unique place in the history of ski jumping. Since 1991, they have hosted the only French leg of the FIS Ski Jumping Summer Grand Prix. Over the years, the Courchevel Summer Grand Prix has established itself as a flagship event on the international calendar, attracting the world's best ski jumpers and witnessing some of the sport's most memorable performances.

Olympic champions and FIS World Cup winners have written some of the most memorable chapters in the history of the venue. Japan's Masahiko Harada, Switzerland's Simon Ammann, Austria's Thomas Morgenstern and Stefan Kraft, and Poland's Kamil Stoch, who currently shares the hill record with a jump of 137 metres, alongside Austria's Michael Hayböck and Daniel Tschofenig, are among the prestigious champions who have left their mark on the Le Praz ski jumps.

Courchevel has also established itself as one of the world's leading venues for women's ski jumping. Since the introduction of women's competitions in 2006, the sport's finest athletes have gathered on the Olympic ski jumps. Sara Takanashi, the most successful female ski jumper in FIS World Cup history and a multiple winner in Courchevel, Marita Kramer, Katharina Althaus, Nika Križnar, and, more recently, Nika Prevc, winner of the 2025–2026 FIS Ski Jumping World Cup overall title, have all played a key role in building the sporting reputation of the Courchevel Summer Grand Prix.

ON THE FRENCH SIDE

The French team will naturally be one of the main attractions on the Le Praz ski jumps. This year's 35th edition carries even greater significance, as it will be the last opportunity for the French athletes to compete on home soil before the venue is modernised ahead of the French Alps 2030 Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games.

All eyes will be on Valentin Foubert. A member of the Club des Sports de Courchevel, the young ski jumper has, in just a few months, become the symbol of the revival of French ski jumping. At the Milano Cortina 2026 Olympic Winter Games, he made history by finishing an outstanding fifth on the normal hill—the best Olympic result ever achieved by a French ski jumper.

Just a few weeks later, he set a new French ski flying record with an impressive jump of 239 metres in Planica, Slovenia.

Competing in front of his home crowd, Valentin Foubert will return to the venue that played such a key role in his development, hoping to deliver another memorable performance. No longer simply one of France's brightest prospects, he now embodies the country's ambitions in ski jumping, with the French Alps 2030 Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games firmly in his sights.

In the women's competition, Joséphine Pagnier will once again lead the French challenge. The skier from France's Jura region, already a two-time FIS World Cup winner with four World Cup podium finishes to her name, has firmly established herself among the world's leading ski jumpers. Her appearance in Courchevel will be one of the highlights of the French leg of the Summer Grand Prix, where home fans will be hoping to see her confirm her status among the sport's elite.

A POPULAR, FESTIVE... AND SPECTACULAR EVENT!!

Every year, the Courchevel Summer Grand Prix is much more than a sporting competition. A true celebration for all, the event delivers a unique spectacle where the performances of the world's best ski jumpers are combined with some of the most breathtaking aerial displays.

For this year's edition, the skies above Courchevel will once again welcome one of the event's biggest attractions with the highly anticipated return of the Rafale Solo Display. Flying above the Olympic ski jumps of Le Praz, the French Air and Space Force's iconic fighter jet will push the limits of aerial demonstration flying. Power, precision and speed will combine in a breathtaking display showcasing the exceptional skill and expertise of French military pilots.

The aerial spectacle will continue with demonstrations by the French Air and Space Force Aerobatic Team (Équipe de Voltige de l'Armée de l'Air et de l'Espace – EVAA), crowned World Champions in 2022 and 2024. Pilots from this elite team will perform a series of spectacular aerobatic manoeuvres, delivering a breathtaking aerial ballet where precision, control and elegance come together to push the boundaries of aerobatic flight.

Another highlight of the weekend will be the return of Adrenalin Flights, whose spectacular aerobatic display is set to captivate the crowd once again. Loops, barrel rolls, close-formation crossovers and perfectly synchronised manoeuvres will combine to create a breathtaking aerial ballet set against the stunning backdrop of the mountains.

On the ground, visitors will have the opportunity to extend the experience by discovering the world of the French Air and Space Force. Teams from the SIRPA Air et Espace (French Air and Space Force Communication and Public Relations Office) will offer an insight into their missions, aircraft and the daily lives of the women and men who serve within the organisation.

The CIRFA (Armed Forces Recruitment and Information Centre) will also be on hand to showcase the wide range of careers and opportunities available within the French Air and Space Force, through interactive activities, presentations and information areas open to visitors of all ages.

Visitors will also have the opportunity to get up close to several iconic aircraft. An Alphajet from the Patrouille de France, displayed at the foot of the Olympic ski jumps, will allow the public to climb into its cockpit, while Mirage 2000 flight simulators will offer a unique immersive experience, putting visitors in the shoes of a fighter pilot through cutting-edge virtual reality.

They will also be able to discover an Aérospatiale SA-341F2 Gazelle helicopter from a private collection, presented as part of a static aircraft display.

Music, a giant screen, food stalls, a partner village, fireworks and prize ceremonies will complete the weekend's festivities. Blending world-class ski jumping with spectacular aerial displays, the Courchevel Summer Grand Prix promises an unforgettable show where sky and mountain become one.
